A FINAL EXHORTATION. gi2 / The machinist or engineer who would conduct the human body from the abnormal condition which is disease, to the normal which is health and happiness, must think and do as a mechanic or his effort will be a failure., The theoretical blank has no place in this day of independent thought. He who runs a bicycle, an automobile or any machine designed for locomotion or other purposes must acquaint himself with the parts, and the whole machine, before he can run it with safety to himself and others. This is the day when man s useful education is the practical. The time has come for the practical man to lay down all undemonstrable theories and prove, what he says by what he does. He cannot afford to be a laughing stock for those who know and are governed by the absolute laws of Nature,...
